HB 4649 – Alternative Method for ICC Approval of Electric Transmission Lines

Rep. Reitz (D – Sparta)
Sen. Haine (D – Alton)

SUPPORT

Under current law, public utilities must obtain approval from the Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC) to construct any transmission line that has a voltage rating of 100kV or more and is longer than one mile. This legislation will retain the traditional transmission line approval process, but would also provide an alternative procedure for transmission line approval that would require:

- the ICC to expedite its decision within 150 days of the filing, with the possibility of a 75 day extension;
- the public utility seeking approval of a transmission line to pay a $100,000 application fee with each filing to fund additional ICC resources needed to implement the expedited process;
- the public utility to satisfy the same criteria for obtaining approval of a transmission line that exists under the state’s current laws and regulations; and
- require the public utility to pay to each county in which the transmission line is constructed a one-time construction fee of $20,000 per mile of transmission line constructed in that county.

Brady's Business – Non-Union Construction, Tax Avoidance

Republican Governor hopeful Bill Brady first wouldn't release his tax records because it would put his business at a competitive disadvantage. Brady, who runs a non-union construction and real estate business, finally gave in under public pressure.

After media scrutiny, the public found out why he wanted to hide his tax records. Using business tax breaks, he did not pay any personal federal income tax for two years and, as reported by Greg Hinz of Crain's Chicago Business, he paid relatively little on his $1.6 million income over the course of the last five years.

"...Mr. Brady -- a state senator and Bloomington home developer -- paid a relatively modest 20.2% in federal taxes despite a reported total adjusted gross income for those years of more than $1.6 million," according to Hinz.

From his own campaign web site, Brady boasts that "...he and his brothers own and run one of the largest privately held home construction and real estate development companies in Illinois as well as property management, mortgage, real estate marketing, hospitality and entertainment companies in Central Illinois."

His company may be big, but Brady clearly found a way to legally dodge paying his taxes. All the while he has been a staunch opponent to working families at the State Capitol.

"Bill Brady has made a career in the legislature and in his personal business of being anti-worker," Illinois AFL-CIO President Michael T. Carrigan said. "His 25 percent voting record is probably generous given the lengths he has gone to side with big business. He has opposed nearly all regulation and accountability for businesses."

Brady has opposed, among many other pro-working family bills, Corporate Accountability (2003), Responsible Bidder (2003), Unemployment Insurance for Locked-Out Workers (2004), Prevailing Wage Expansion (2007), Employee Misclassification Prohibition (2007) and funding the $34 billion Capital Bill in 2009.

Republicans Block Banking Reform Three Times

While 10,000 March on Wall Street Demanding Changes

For three days in a row this week, Democrats in the Senate tried to move a banking reform bill that will create tight financial regulations and establish an independent consumer protection agency, but all Republican members and one Democrat – Sen. Ben Nelson (NE) voted no, stalling the bill. Finally Wednesday afternoon Republicans, aware of mounting public sentiment against Wall Street, indicated they would allow the vote to the floor for discussion. On Thursday, debate began. A vote on the bill is not expected until next week.

Also on Thursday, an estimated 10,000 union members and religious and community groups marched in Lower Manhattan New York near Wall Street demanding not only financial regulatory reform but calling for Wall Street banks to pay for the damage they caused to the U.S. economy with taxes on CEO bonuses and lucrative financial deals.
