GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Governor Quinn Unveils Budget Blueprint

Governor Quinn addressed a joint session of the General Assembly on Wednesday this week, to outline his FY12 budget proposal. The governor reported that Illinois has $8.7 billion in overdue bills, and that the state pays its bills six to eight months behind schedule. This debt is still there, despite the fact that legislators passed and Quinn approved an income tax increase in January.

One of the key components of Quinn's address was his debt restructuring plan. Senate President Cullerton has introduced SB 3, which would bond/borrow the $8.7 billion to pay off the overdue bills. In doing so, it would infuse the Illinois economy immediately with $8.7 billion, and allow the state to slowly pay off the bonds. Lawmakers who oppose borrowing to pay overdue bills will in effect be supporting teacher layoffs, additional cuts to fire and police personnel and cuts to frontline state services.

Another idea proposed by Quinn was to reduce the number of school districts in Illinois from 869 to no more than 300. This could potentially free up additional funding for education. In addition,

Quinn indicated that he would like to increase funding for the monetary assistance program, which provides scholarships for qualified needy students, with a particular focus on community college students.

The new budget proposal from Gov. Pat Quinn calls for hiring hundreds of new state employees. An analysis by House Democrats puts the increase at 945. That's a bump of only 1.7%.

The Corrections Department would see the largest increase in new workers - 187. The Quinn administration says it will actually save money by cutting overtime costs. The Transportation Department would get 150 employees, 101 at the Department of Public Health, and 97 at Veterans Affairs. ■

Governor’s Office Calls Meetings on Workers’ Compensation and Unemployment Insurance

Affiliates of the Illinois AFL-CIO and business leaders have been asked by the Governor’s office to discuss the issues of workers’ compensation and unemployment insurance. Jerry Stermer, senior advisor to Governor Quinn, is mediating the discussions along with members from each legislative caucus.

On Thursday, it was agreed by the Governor and legislative leaders that consideration of legislation on unemployment insurance would go through the “agreed bill process” meaning that legislators would be asked to hold their bills on unemployment and instead have them considered as part of the agreed bill process. Senator Terry Link, Senator John O. Jones, Representative Ed Sullivan and Representative Frank Mautino will represent their respective caucus during the negotiations.

On Thursday, February 10, a meeting was convened by the Governor’s office to discuss changes to the Workers’ Compensation Act. The Governor’s office called the meeting a fact finding summit and invited labor leaders, business groups and representatives of medical providers to state their position on potential changes to the Act. Senator Kwame Raoul, Senate Republican Leader Christine Radogno, Representative Dan Brady and Representative John Bradley represented their respective caucus during the meeting.

During the closing days of the 96th General Assembly in January, attempts were made to make significant changes to the Workers’ Compensation Act without going through the time honored agreed bill process. In last week’s meeting, business leaders stated that they were committed to introducing and passing legislation on workers’ compensation outside of the agreed bill process in the 97th General Assembly. ■

NATIONAL

30,000 Descend on Wisconsin Capitol

"Freedom! Democracy! Unions!" were the cries of an estimated 30,000 people at the Wisconsin state capitol opposing Republican Gov. Scott Walker's attempt to strip public employees of their bargaining rights. Three days of massive rallies, 15 school systems closed as teachers march on the capitol, including Madison's affecting 24,000 children; the Archbishop & Chancellor of UM both put out letters supporting the workers as did Green Bay Packers players; President Obama weighed in saying it looks like just an attack on workers; Education Secretary Duncan said he's concerned about attacks on teachers and will call Gov. Walker; and finally, Democratic senators left the state Thursday to prevent a vote on the measure.

National media coverage of the Wisconsin protest has raised awareness of Republican-planned attempts to crush unions and workers' rights. Rachel Maddow, MSNBC, summarized the situation on her program Thursday night by saying "this is a Democrat vs Republican issue." She posted charts of campaign contributions for the last two national elections that showed the only large donors giving to Democrats were labor unions. She surmised that the Republican Party could eliminate those large donations by enacting state laws to minimize unions.

Richard Trumka is expected to be in Wisconsin today. The national AFL-CIO has engaged their Illinois E-Activist list to encourage Illinois workers to join the Wisconsin battle in solidarity.
